

My name is Peter Broomhall and I started running races at the ripe age of 6 when I ran my first race in Conway, NH. It was the Star Trek 10K. I have always had a great passion for running. As I continued to evolve, I ran my first marathon at the age of 14. When I was 21, I moved out to California Mountains and am now living in Truckee, CA near the beautiful Lake Tahoe. I took some time away from running in my twenties, but ultimately found my way back and started running marathons again.

In 2011 I decided to take the plunge into Ultra Marathons. The joy of running mountains and trail was quickly an instant hit for me and I have maintained being an ultra-runner since. I have now completed four 100 miles' races which include the Tahoe Rim Trail Endurance Runs 100, The Bighorn 100, The Leadville 100 and finally the legendary Western States 100. A proud achievement of mine is that I have finished all four races in under 24 hours.

I am a proud father of my daughter Siri and have an amazing wife Erin who supports my silly adventures. I am lucky to have strong family backing for these as it can be time-consuming, to say the least.

I reached out to Running 4 Rare this fall because I have lost my older sister Jennifer Santos to a rare disease called CIPD. While generally treatable my sister fell under a spectrum where CIDP wasn't treatable. None of the known treatments worked. Beyond that, it took up until the final moments for my sister to be fully diagnosed. It is a harsh reminder that we have a lot of research that is needed in the medical world. The human body is the world's biggest mystery still and I hope the fundraising I produce can help advance medical research and help people with Rare diseases or disorders.
